

College of Social Science Honor Code

We, the College of Social Science Spartans, in order to meet our responsibility to each other within the broader Michigan State University community and to align student and faculty professionalism in order to create an atmosphere for the free and open exchange of ideas, adopt this honor code to uphold the following values:

To respect individual and group diversity.

We have much to learn from one another

To take pride in the university community.

This is our home, not only our school

To ensure that no individual has an unfair academic or personal advantage over another.

Everyone's grade must reflect their work, not their relationship with faculty or other students

To take accountability for one's own actions.

Our integrity is worth more than our grade

To work together to uphold the value of excellence.

We hold ourselves and our colleagues to a higher standard

We the faculty, students, and administration of the College of Social Science expect that these values will be demonstrated inside and outside of the classroom, and will be internalized and upheld in our lives beyond our times at MSU.